

What our customers say about us

Gareth Jarrett, Inventory Manager at Taylor & Francis Books

Taylor & Francis, building on two centuries of experience, has grown rapidly over the past two decades to become a leading international academic publisher. Based in the UK, the group has offices in London, Hove, Basingstoke and Abingdon, as well as international offices in New York, Boca Raton, Philadelphia, Singapore and Melbourne. The group publishes more than 700 journals and 2,500 new books each year, with a backlist of well over 60,000 specialist titles.

"Printondemand-worldwide is one of our core Print on Demand (POD) suppliers, and it has grown rapidly to become a very valuable partner for us, primarily because of its flexibility, outstanding customer service and excellent quality.

"We first started working with Printondemand-worldwide five years ago, when we decided we needed more options for supplying our growing POD list. We needed more variety and resilience, and Printondemand-worldwide was able to deliver that. The company is relatively new to the market, compared with other suppliers, but has grown very quickly and offers a high level of quality. Clear text and illustrations printed on good quality paper are important to us and to our customers, and we have deliberately placed some titles with Printondemand-worldwide to achieve that quality level."

Taylor & Francis has been producing a growing proportion of its titles through on-demand digital print for several years. Gareth says the benefits are clear. "The advantages are twofold - you can make better use of your backlist by having more titles available and therefore increase your potential revenue
